The Danger of Lying In Bed.

Lack of muscular exercise is the first result of lying in bed. As a result the appetite is weakened, the digestive action slows down and the muscles of the stomach and abdomen cease to act upon the intestinal mass. When the body is in a recumbent position the heart works with the least expenditure of effort and the least fatigue and the circulation and the functional activity are decreased. But unless the subject is exceptionally vigorous all the benefits are counterbalanced by dangers. In bed the subject is shut away from fresh air and sunlight. The result of that deprivation is a condition similar to anemia. But the supreme menace to the weak or the aged confined to bed is the clogging of the pulmonary circulation, an action which frequently results in passive congestion of both sides of the lungs. For this reason the simple fracture of a bone may be the cause of death, because when the patient lies in bed there is no movement of the muscles to act as an incentive to deep breathing.—Harper's.

IS DONE WITH EUROPE

CAPITALIST TELLS WHY HE PREFERS "GOD'S OWN COUNTRY."

Something of a Moral in This Story of a Modern Promoter Who Was Asked Questions That Seemed Impertinent.

The capitalist, as the customs officer rummaged in his steamer trunk, chewed the end of his cigar viciously.

"Well, anyhow," he said, 'I'm glad to be back in God's own country again."

"How did you make out, cap, with that scheme of yours ever there?" a financial editor asked.

The capitalist turned a deep red. He swelled and stiffened. He seemed to burst.

"Blankety blank blank!" he roared. "Asterisks and dashes! Wait till I tell you!

"I put up in Paris at the Bristol in the Place Vendome—the hotel of kings, you know—and I spent money regardless in making my scheme known. I announced a capitalization of a hundered million francs—that's twenty millions in our money.

"Well, the government got after me. They asked me the most ridiculous and impudent questions about assets and all that. They actually wanted me to show that I had a business and a plant and a stock the full value of capitalization!"

The capitalist was seized with another spasm of profanity. "Blankety blank blank! Blankety.

"Do you know what the law is in France?" he shouted. "Why, in France, you can't capitalize a concern for more than it's worth. Not a penny more than it's worth. So, of course, my scheme fell through. Watering stocks is forbidden by law over there. Did you ever hear of such a thing? Why, the organizers of our steel trusts and railroad mergers and so forth would be, if they lived in France—"

He laughed with bitterness and scorn.

"If they lived in France, they'd all be in jail!"

He took a deep breath. He now seemed a little calmer.

"So here I am," he said, "back in in God's own country again. Back in the land of the free. Here, thank goodness, we haven't got a meddling, interfering government butting in on our private affairs insisting that the public must have solid value for every share of stock bought, the same as if it was buying a house or a suit of clothes. Rank paternalism—that's what I call it. And we want none of it here.

"No, siree! We want none of it in God's own country," the capitalist ended. "And now I'll bid you good day. Did I tell you I had an option on the Oil City and the Carbondale for two million apiece? I expect to merge 'em—total cost four millions—and then to capitalize 'em for thirty million. Twenty-six millions of profit. How is that!"—Los Angeles Times.

Salad to Match Your Gown.

Prompted by a sense of the harmonious in color schemes, the makers of the carte du jour have inserted an item on the menu known as orchid salad, which has the merit of blending delightfully with gowns of green or yellow. Of course, it would be bourgeoise in the extreme were m'sieu to protest when his check shows that this most recent gastronomic creation costs $2 a pound. Here is a tidbit which has evoked a charmed exclamation from mam'selle, whose draperies are just the proper shade of green!

The dish takes its name from the fact that the leaves are constructed like those of the orchid. The plant is native to Italy, but two Long Islanders have undertaken to supply the fruiterers.—New York Evening Sun.

How to Avoid Lightning.

The annual loss of life by lightning in the United States is less than three hundred and the average damage to property is about one million five hundred thousand dollars, according to Prof John Zeleny of Minnesota university.

The following rules to prevent losing life by lightning were given by the professor:

Do not stand near metal pipes.

Keep away from the open fireplace.

Do not stand near a building or a telegraph pole.

A gun, fishing rod or umbrella are dangerous.

Avoid isolated trees.

Keep away from elm, oak, poplar or ash trees as they are most likely to be struck.

Buying Him Cigars.

President Hadley of Yale at the Carnegie Foundation's recent luncheon in New York said of a certain charge:

"Such a charge indicates ignorance—ludicrous ignorance. It reminds me of the young lady who desired to buy a box of cigars for her fiance's Christmas.

"This young lady, entering the most fashionable tobacconist's on Fifth avenue, said:

"'I want to get a box of cigars for a tall, slender man with blue eyes and a pale brown mustache—my fiance, in fact. Now, George wears dark colors usually, and I suppose a long, black cigar would suit him best, don't you think?'"

HOW GERMAN DOLL IS MADE

Interesting Process of Manufacturing Heads, Arms and Legs—Wig Is Final Touch.

The making of the composition dolls as seen in the German factories, is an interesting process, even though some of the rooms are hot, steamy places where one does not care to stay long at a time, Mrs. C. R. Miller writes in Leslie's. First, there is the kneading room, where a big mixing trough is set up, and in this all sorts of rag bag material are to be found—old gloves, rags, bits of cardboard, etc., and gum tragacanth. This mixture is kneaded by hand to the consistency of a paste, heated and carried into the moldroom. There it is dipped up by women and poured into the patterns, which are set up in rows. The molds are put away until they are cold enough to handle, when a workman, by a dextrous movement of his hands, separates the leaden sides, and the doll's head is revealed. The polisher then trims off the ragged seams and sends the heads to another room, where the holes for the eyes are cut out. This is an extremely delicate task, as all the sockets must be of uniform size. The work is done by hand, a long, sharp knife being used.

The hands are next painted, waxed or glazed, depending upon the character of the material from which they are made. The arms, legs and hands are molded in the same manner as the heads—a special machine being used for stamping out the hands. These parts are painted in flesh color, while the heads must have rosy cheeks, red lips and dark or light eyebrows, as the color of the eyes used may require. Putting in the eyes is a simple operation, unless the eyes are to open and shut, in which case the balancing of the head becomes a matter of some skill. Germany possesses a secret formula for the enamel used on the faces, and the dainty, natural flesh tint of the better grade of dolls is the result of this process. The making of the eyes is a dreary task, for it must be done away from the sunlight, and in some parts of Germany the eyemakers work in the cellars. It is said that one town supplies three-fourths of all the dolls' eyes used. Violet is the most difficult color to mix, and few violet eyed dolls are found.

The wig is the final touch, and this is usually made of real hair imported from China. The hair used for blond dolls is the same, except that the color is extracted.

There Is No "Czar."

Commenting on the spelling of names in the far east, the London Post Odessa correspondent observes that the correct spelling of the Russian monarch's title is tsar, not czar. But whence comes, he asks, our English derivation of the name tsarina? That is a title practically unknown in Russia. Tsaritsa is correct, but the empress is more commonly referred to as the imperatritza, or gossudarinya.

Neither is the title tsar much heard among Russians; his majesty is usually spoken of as the gossudar, Grand duke is also a common misnomer.

The Russian title is veliko kniaz, meaning grand prince. The Russian name for duke, adapted from the German, is gerzog (there is no "h" in the slav alphabet), and gerzogina is in the feminine.

To Explore the Amazon Valley

A TRIBUTARY OF THE AMAZON

PREPARATIONS are being made by the University of Pennsylvania to send an expedition to the Amazon valley for the purpose of collecting information relative to the aboriginal inhabitants and to explore the forests where these primitive peoples still roam untouched by civilization.

It is expected that the expedition will be one of the best equipped that has ever left the United States for scientific purposes. A steam yacht has been provided and furnished with all the apparatus which can contribute either to the comfort and safety of the members of the expedition or to the prosecution of the scientific inquiries for which the expedition was organized. This steamer is 132 feet in length and, drawing only six and one-half feet of water, is designed to navigate even the smaller tributaries of the great main basin of the Amazon for many thousand of miles.

Explore Tributaries First.

A definite plan of campaign has been mapped out for the expedition and the itinerary of the steamer has been determined up to a certain point. Leaving Philadelphia in January, the steamer will proceed to Para and there make final preparations for an extended cruise on the great river system. It is proposed, first, to explore the tributaries which flow from the north and which have their sources in the mountains on the borders of Brazil and the Guianas. In these almost unknown regions live representatives of the great Carib stock, of whom practically nothing is known, as well as representatives of the equally important Arawak stock. The next region to be explored is that which is drained by the Rio Negro with its affluents, the Rio Branco and Yabahana Indian.

the Uaupes. Finally, an effort will be made to reach the isolated tribes that inhabit the vast unexplored forests between the Rio Madeira, the Rio Tapajos and the Rio Purus. In each case the steamer will proceed as far as possible up the affluents and canoes will be used to reach the less accessible headwaters. Since the tribes, as a rule, live some distance from the rivers, it will be necessary for the members of the expedition to penetrate into the forests and to remain in the native villages long enough to make the necessary observations and to make collections to illustrate the condition of the native arts. These collections will then be carried by whatever means of conveyance the natives can provide, to the steamer, which will thus become a storehouse of ethnological material until such time as the collections can be conveniently embarked at Manaos for shipment to New York and Philadelphia.

Brazil to Co-Operate.

It is proposed that while the exploring parties are engaged with the natives in their distant haunts, the party in charge of the steamer will conduct hydrographic surveys of the rivers and their tributaries. In this way a great deal of geographical information will be obtained which will be useful from a scientific standpoint, as well as from practical considerations.

The government of Brazil, always interested in whatever pertains to scientific investigation, has indicated its readiness to co-operate with the University of Pennsylvania in order to secure the success of the expedition and to make its labors most effective. The important results which may be expected from this undertaking will bring as much credit to Brazil as to the University of Pennsylvania, and will secure for both scientific and practical results of the very greatest permanent value.

The valley of the Amazon is one vast forest, where modern civilization has never penetrated and where the only industry connected with modern life that has taken root is the extraction of rubber from the native forests. Neither agriculture nor mineral wealth has attracted the white man's enterprise.

HAS NO CHANCE TO ESCAPE

Seal Once Harpooned by Eskimo Hunter Cannot Fail to Become His Prey.

When once he has gone to the trouble of splicing a fine spear handle the Eskimo does not wish to break it, so the point is put on with a toggle or joint. When a seal or walrus is harpooned the sudden struggle of the animal does not break the spear, but merely unjoints the point, and the more the animal struggles the more the point turns crosswise in the wound and the firmer the barbs take hold. But the animal cannot escape, for with thongs of skin the point is connected with the spear shaft. The animal merely swims away or dives deep into the sea, carrying with him the spear. The long leather thong which is attached to it uncoils from the deck of the kyack and plays out. It carries with it a drag like a kite, which retards the animal and exhausts him, but does not pull hard enough to break the line. Even this drag is made of skin stretched over a spliced framework. When the line is all played out it is seen to be attached to a float which is also carried on the deck of the boat. This is made of an inflated skin. It has plugs and attachments cleverly carved from ivory, for wood is far too precious to be used in this land of ivory so far from the forests. The float serves as a buoy so that the Eskimo can follow the animal and find it after it gives up its struggle and dies. Then, too, the float keeps the catch from sinking and being lost in the ocean's depths.—Southern Workman.

Prepared for Peril.

"Have you made your will, John?"

"Yes, mother."

"Have you oiled and loaded your revolver?"

"Yes."

"And put on your bullet-proof jacket?"

"Yes."

"Is your prayer-book in the pocket over your heart?"

"Yes."

"Then go where duty calls you, dear."

There were no tears in that brave mother's eyes as she watched her son march away on his business trip to New York city. The women of the suburbs learn Spartan sternness in these wild, murderous days.—Newark News.

What He Would Do.

"What would you do," asked the lieutenant who was instructing the class in aviation, "if you were up a thousand feet in the air and the steering gear should go wrong or the engine should fail?"

"I'd hit the earth in about twinty seconds, I'm thinkin'," replied Sergeant McManus.

HONESTY THE BEST POLICY

Grace's Long List of Fictitious Admirers Had Unfortunate Results for Her.

"No wonder I feel so grouchy!" pouted Grace, as she shut the book she was reading with a slam. "Every time that phone rings I think it will be Edward. He promised to call me up the next day, and today is Saturday. Six days have passed, and not a word. It is impossible that he could be so busy. Surely, he could find some time to call me up. How foolish of me to believe all the nice nothings he told me Monday evening, but he spoke so sincerely. If that phone rings again, and it is some dear girl telling me of her many engagements, I will bang the receiver. I am getting tired of listening to other people's good times, and acting enthusiastic when I would like to say, 'I don't care.' And sis is not at home today to disturb me. Generally, she seats herself right next to me, and takes in every word of it. If she is not in sight she is at the extension, and I have to have each word repeated until the pleasure is all gone."

Just then Grace bounced up. The phone, the doorbell—which should she answer first? She ran to the phone.

"Hello! Oh, Ed, I am so glad to hear from you. Just a moment, Ed, the doorbell is ringing."

"Hello, sis, be quiet. I am telephoning. I don't care whom you met. Tell me after. Go to your room and stay there."

In a second she was back at the phone.

"Hello, Ed! Yes, isn't the door a nuisance? I really have been so busy I didn't get time to think of any phone messages. It certainly don't seem nearly a week since—Oh, just a moment, Ed.

"Sis, be still. I don't know where your white vail it. You make so much noise I don't know what I am saying to Ed. I'll look for it after a while. Now hush just for five minutes.

"Hello, Ed! I'm back again. It was the doorbell again. A box of sweet peas for me. Yes, just lovely. Wonderful weather? I should say! Automobiling? Fine weather for that. Oh, Ed, just a moment—that bell again—

"Now, sis, just stop calling me. I don't keep track of your clothes. I can't help it if all your silk stockings are ripped. You should darn them. Then wear a cotton pair—be still. I mean it! What will I tell Ed this time? Can't tell him it is you. He will think you have no bringing up—a reflection on our family. I'll buy you a new pair if you promise not to talk—now remember.

"Hello, hello, Ed. Are you still there? You must excuse me for interrupting you so often, but I just got a box of candy. Yes, canday. Delicious? I should say. Well, you know it takes some time to sign for it—and then—what—popular did you say? Oh, no—I can't understand you, Ed. My sister, did you say? With you? Why, of course, she will be glad to go, I know. You say I have too many other admirers? Oh, yes, I know I will enjoy the candy and flowers. Just a moment, and I'll call sis to the phone."

Grace went to her sister's room and told her she was wanted at the phone.

"But let me tell you," she continued, "you can go riding with Ed under one condition, and that is that you do not tell him that I did not get the candy and flowers."

Sis ran to the phone enthusiastically, and while she was saying "I'll be glad to go," Grace walked in the library, gazing upon an old motto which read: "Honesty is the best Policy."—New York Press.

Not a Lover of the Country.

Flavel Rankin is one of these city chaps that can't see the country at all. He says he tried living in the rural districts once and never again for him. Tommy Scott, the cigar man, spent his vacation in the country this summer and came back enthusiastic about it. He met Rankin on the street shortly after he returned.

"Hello, Flavvie!" he shouted. "Had your vacation yet?"

"Yes—a month ago."

"Go to the country?"

"No, I didn't go to the country. But I got the same results right home. I told the iceman to stop coming, bought a lot of stale vegetables, took the springs out of my bed, had the daily papers delivered two days late, took the screens out and set a kerosene lamp in the window and spent each morning in the back yard without my hat until my nose peeled. That's why I look as if I'd been in the country."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Life of a Drop of Water.

A German professor named Meinardue has amused himself with calculating how long a drop of water stays in the ocean before it is evaporated, and how soon it returns to the sea.

Calculating—he does not say how—the total evaporation from the surface of the ocean and estimating the total volume of water in the oceans, a drop of water entering the ocean will stay there 3,460 years, provided it awaits its turn to be evaporated.

However, the professor admits that the surface water stands a good chance of getting ahead of its turn.

The average stay out of the ocean is only twelve days before it has fallen back again to the sea.

TROUBLE AT WOMAN'S CLUB

Assertion That Husband Put on Shirt With One Sleeve Right Side Out Started Fuss.

"My husband did the foolishest thing this morning you ever heard of. When he got up he put on his shirt with one sleeve right side out and the other wrong side out."

"One sleeve wrong side out and the other—why, Mrs. Jipes, he couldn't possibly have done such a thing as that."

"Why not?"

"It's a physical impossibility."

"But I saw him do it."

"You thought you did, but—"

"Well, like that! Dispute my word, do you? I'll let you know—

"Say, Mrs. Glimmer, do you think anybody could put on a shirt with one sleeve right side out and the other wrong side out?"

"He might if it was made that way; not otherwise."

"What did I tell you, Mrs. Ji—"

"That doesn't settle it, Mrs. Skimmerhorn. Say, Mrs. Bilby, do you see anything absurd in the idea that a man can put his shirt on with one sleeve wrong side out and the other right side out?"

"Yes."

"I don't see how he could, Mrs. Jipes."

"Well, I saw my husband do it. Mrs. Carstone, you believe me, don't you?"

"Of course I do. There's nothing absurd about that."

"There! Perhaps you'll—"

"That doesn't decide it. Look here, Mrs. Hankins, did you ever see anybody wearing a shirt with one sleeve right side out and the other wrong side out?"

"I never did, Mrs. Skimmerhorn, but if Mrs. Jipes says so I've no reason to—"

"Did you, Mrs. Winters?"

"No, nor anybody else."

"So! Think I'm telling a falsehood, do you?'

"I didn't say so, Mrs. Jipes, but it's so perfectly absurd, so manifestly impossible, that—"

"Cat! I'll—"

(Here the gavel fell.)

"Ladies, if you please, we will resume the consideration of the question pertaining to changing the hour of meeting. A motion will be in order."

What She Meant.

"So you think I smoke too much?" he asks just to keep up a conversation that seemed to be languishing.

"Not at all," she answered, not very skillfully concealing a yawn.

"You said you thought so."

"Pardon me. I don't think you are smoking too much."

"Didn't you say that I'd die if I didn't cut it down?"

"Yes, that's what I said."

It took him a long time to get it, and then he was quite angry.

TWO VIEWS.

She—I just love a good skate.

He—Yes, I would, too, if it wasn't for the morning after.

Not Suited.

"You refused the earl, Amalie, dear?"

Young Widow—He's too old for me.

"But his title?"

"That's too new for me!"

His Policy.

"A doctor works on the reciprocity plan."

"How so?"

"Whenever he pays visits, he makes visits pay him."

His Motto.

"How do you stand on the income tax question?"

"My motto is this: 'Give me the incomes of the people and I care not who collects their taxes.'"

WOMAN SICK FOURTEEN YEARS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Golf Ball Poachers.

Many complaints have been received by the police lately of the loss of golf balls from the Epping Forest links, while actually in play. It is alleged that gangs of youths gather at places on the links where the players cannot see the balls fall, and that the balls disappear sometimes even when they fall on the fairway. As the result of a watch kept by the police in trees and behind hedges, several prosecutions have taken place recently.—London Mail.

The misunderstanding of words frequently causes strange answers. A child who had been taught that Socrates had a wife who was unpleasant to him, and that the great philosopher drank hemlock, when asked the cause of his death, replied: "Socrates died from an overdose of wedlock."

IN HOLY MATRIMONY

KANSAS JUDGE BOUND COUPLE WITH THE STRONGEST TIES.

Somewhat Peculiar Marriage Ceremony That Satisfied the Chief Participants and a Large and Appreciative Audience.

In an early day in Kansas a couple appeared before a probate judge named Aplington to be wed. The judge had never performed a marriage ceremony, but he determined to do the job according to the statutes in such case made and provided, as he understood them. There was a large and appreciative audience present, and the judge commenced proceedings:

"Fellow Citizens: This here man and this here woman have appeared before this court to be hitched in the legal bands of wedlock. If any galloot in the mob knows of anything that might block the game if took to a higher court, let him toot his bazoo or else keep his jaw to himself now and forevermore. All in favor of my proceedings as authorized by law say 'I,' contrary, 'No.' Nobody said 'No.' The motion's carried unanimously and the court rules that there is nothing to prevent the trying of the case.

"Now," continued the judge, "grip your fins." The candidates joined hands. "Amos Peabody, do you solemnly swear that you'll freeze to Mandy forever and provide for her, and treat her square and white, according to the rules and regulations set down to govern such cases in the laws of the United States, so help me God?"

"Yes, sir, I do."

"That fixes your end of the bargain. Mandy Thomas, do you solemnly swear that you'll hang on to Amos for all coming time; that you'll nurse him in sickness and be square with him in wellness; that you'll always be to him a good, true, honest, up and up wife under the penalties prescribed by the law for the punishment of such offenses. Do you swear this, so help you God?"

"I swear I will."

"Then by the power vested in me as probate judge in and for Morris county, state of Kansas, I, John Aplington, pronounce you, Amos Peabody, husband, and you, Mandy Thomas, wife, and legalize you to remain such now and forevermore; and you'll stan dcommitted until the fees and costs are paid in full, and may God have mercy on your souls."—Council Grove Republican.

Gladiator in Armor Exhumed.

During some important excavations undertaken at Mount Cavo, in the Roman Campagna, in the hope of tracing an ancient temple devoted to Jupiter, the diggers struck upon an extensive second century cemetery, which had evidently been planned out on the surface of a gigantic landslip on the side of the mountain caused by earthquakes, which had buried the older existing buildings.

A giant warrior, or gladiator, clad in iron armor, was discovered in one of the tombs, which was covered with big tiles taken from the Temple of Tiberius. A number of bronze coins bearing the effigy of the Empress of Faustina, in addition to a quantity of rings, safety pins and brooches of a very early period, a terra-cotta elephant's head, and a fragmentary vase, containing inscriptions, are among the latest finds. The exploration is being pushed forward in view of the international archaeological congress which is about to assemble in Rome.—London Chronicle.

Not a Suitable Car.

I am very keen on light-colored overcoats, relates a prominent actor. Last summer, while home, I visited several of the Detroit auto factories, and while on one of these visits I ran across an old acquaintance who was holding down the position of "gas man."

"Hello, Frank," said Pat, "what are ye goin' to do? Buy a car?"

I told him I was going to try out a few, anyhow.

I rode in several cars and finally decided to try out a little car which attracted attention because of its very small size. Still wearing the light overcoat, I stepped into the little buzz wagon and took the usual trip up the street and back.

On my return Pat very excitedly grabbed my hand and said:

"Begorra, Frank, don't buy that car, whatever ye do."

I inquired the reason, and he said:

"Faith, I watched ye going up the street, and I swear ye looked as though ye had wheels on yer overcoat."

Both Went Shopping.

Mrs. McFuddle started out shopping on Christmas eve. She had a $10 note, and this is what she brought home:

One young tree, a rocking horse, a drum, a horn, a train on a track, a box of cigars, a box of candy, socks, stockings, handkerchiefs, gloves, perfume, slippers, oranges, apples, nuts, books, a kimono and an express wagon filled with packages.

Mr. McFuddle started out shopping on Christmas eve. He had a $10 note, and this is what he brought home:

One silver fizz, four dry Martinis, nine whiskies, one sherry, one Bronx cocktail, one Sazerac, three sloe gin rickeys, four mugs of Tom and Jerry, six assorted doses of egg nog, eleven beers and a mess of free lunch. And they were all in one package.

IN SIBERIAN WASTES

DESOLATE AND BLEAK COUNTRY OF THE NORTH.

Valuable Ivory Still Yielded From Animals That Lived Centuries Ago—Reindeer and Dogs Used as Beasts of Burden.

It is not generally known that Siberia furnishes a large quantity of ivory to the markets of the world, but the production of it belongs to another age and to a species of animals that does not now exist.

The ivory is cut from the tusks of mammoths whose skeletons are found frozen in masses of ice or buried in mud of Arctic rivers and swamps.

Even to wild animals these bogs are forbidden ground. The nimble reindeer can sometimes cross them safely in the summer, but most other large animals would be engulfed. With the summer thaw that penetrates more deeply than usual into the ground some of these antediluvian monsters are always exposed.

It is to recover these valuable fossil tusks, also to hunt and trap the fur-bearing animals and transport the pelts of the sable, ermine and sea otter back to civilization that forms a chief occupation of many of the Siberian natives. According to the Railroad Man's Magazine, they make the most perilous freighting journeys in the world, beset by all sorts of hardships.

The people are divided into two classes, the reindeer breeder and the dog-breeding tribes. The former live entirely on the products of their reindeer herds. Some of the reindeer tribes use their animals for riding and sledge driving only and not for food purpose. The Yakuts, one of the largest and most progressive tribes, use their deer entirely for transportation purposes.

Two large animals are always used to a freight sledge. These carry merchandise, mail and furs all over the northern part of the province of Yakutsk. Their reindeer are of great size, larger than those possessed by the other reindeer people.

If well pastured and not overworked a trained pair of harnessed reindeer can make 50 to 75 miles a day, provided that the snow is thin and hard on the tundra. When tired the deer must be immediately rested. If compelled to travel further they become exhausted and often drop dead.

The team dogs serve till 10 or 12 years old. After the sixth or seventh year they begin to decline. The dogs are harnessed in pairs to a strong seal thong, which serves the place of a wiffletree. A full team consists of six or seven pairs.

The course is directed by special call words. These are understood by the leading dog, which is trained especially for that purpose. The harness consists of a breastpiece and two or three bands across the back. The dogs pull on the traces somewhat obliquely, so as to leave sufficient room between them to avoid jostling. Even when a young or badly trained dog is matched to an old one the elder will actually prevent its companion from causing trouble, biting it severely every time it tries to leap across the strap.

Shy or disobedient dogs are placed nearer to the sledge, where they can be reached by the whip. At the rear more exertion is required, since the sledge, on every undulation of the ground, pulls backward. Strong animals somewhat slow from age or from lack of mettle are usually placed at the rear and those that are more brisk in the front.

With a light sledge and good dogs 150 miles can be traveled in 24 hours. Two hundred miles have been made in two days. The dogs are fed once a day, usually in the evening. A piece of blubber about two inches square and some shreds of walrus meat, dried or frozen fish, form the daily ration of every dog.

A good team of 12 dogs can haul from 400 to 600 pounds. One of the long sledge journeys made by the inland reindeer people is over 500 miles, in March and April, when they make up a trading caravan of reindeer skins for boots and clothing, etc., which they take to East Cape on the Pacific to barter to Americans and whalers.

Poor Economy.

Charles M. Schwab, apropos of his superb work in aid of released convicts, said modestly in New York:

"Oh, it is economy to help these men. Help them a little, and their lives, instead of being wasted, are of value to the nation.

"To be niggardly and timid about helping such men is to be like the chap who was asked, the first of the year, to buy a calendar.

"This chap, after studying the calendar thoughtfully, handed it back with a frown.

"'No, no,' he said. 'I can't afford it. I may be dead before the year is out.'"

Imagination Needed Message.

H. D. Howells at luncheon at Kittery Point said of a certain popular novelist:

"There is about as much poetry in him as there is in McMasters.

"McMasters, you know, was walking with a beautiful girl in a wild New England wood.

"'What is your favorite flower, Mr. McMasters?' the girl asked softly.

"McMasters thought a moment, then cleared his throat and answered:

"'Well, I believe I like the whole wheat best.'"—New York Tribune.

Seek Something to Replace Coal.

Coal offers to mankind solar energy in its most concentrated form. Indeed modern civilization may be said to be the daughter of coal. But the supply of coal is not inexhaustible and every ton of it taken out of the earth leaves just that much less for the future needs of the world. Hence it is that today we are looking about us so anxiously for some other source of fuel.

Why not in Campbell?

During a recent visit to Oregon we were impressed with the fact that Oregon is placing herself on the list as a truly progressive state. Through the initiative and referendum many up-to-date methods and measures are put into operation.

One evidence of keeping abreast the times, is found in the efficient work done at the Oregon Agricultural College, where, in a thorough and painstaking manner they are endeavoring to solve industrial and agricultural problems in a practical way.

At this College may be found between 1200 and 1500 of the brightest, most ambitious young people of the state qualifying themselves for doing better work on its farms and in its orchards, gardens, and dairies, than has ever been done before.

In one basement may be found a lot of young men—and men not so young—all busy with the boughs of fruit trees, learning about pruning, budding and grafting, with the twigs and tools in their hands. Another room is devoted to the study of seeds. Here may be found seeds that are being tested as to their germinating qualities, between layers of blotting paper, and one can see, how the comparative purity of alfalfa and other seeds may be learned by winnowing and hand-picking every foreign seed contained in the lot. Another room is devoted to abnormal growths on fruit trees and to a study of the causes. Whatever interferes with the culture or the best development of any crop or any product of the farm, the orchard or the dairy is being patiently and thoroughly investigated by enthusiastic teachers and students. In the dairy you will find a model herd and the most approved methods of feeding, milking and butter-making. Then there are the poultry pens and yards, where it is being shown to be possible to breed hens that will average 200 eggs a year!

Then there are the working quarters of the two hundred girls who are living there and learning both the theory and practice of domestic science; cooking the best, most satisfying meals possible.

Until these later years girls have not been taught to put thought in all they do. We are reminded of a celebrated artist who produced marvelous effects in the treatment of his landscape paintings. One day an amateur, fondly hoping to learn the secret of his success inquired, "Do tell me please, what you mix your paints with'?"

"With brains, madam, "gravely replied the artist. Thinking of these young house-keepers and home-makers now being trained to highest efficiency, one is led to exclaim "What farms, what shops, what homes may we not look for, when activities in all these lines shall be "mixed with brains'." The habits of living creatures, the essentials in soils, the wholesomeness of foods are not these of more practical value than the study of dead languages, or the almost meaningless—to some minds at least—problems of higher mathematics. In Santa Clara county we have very nearly an ideal climate and why should we hesitate to establish School Gardens, already so valued in European countries. We read that Austro-Hungary can boast of nearly 20,000 school gardens. Bohemia has 4,500 school gardens and her enormous crops of fruit are largely due to school instruction.

In Belgium all teachers are required to give theoretical and practical instruction in botany, horticulture and agriculture.

California has an efficient Agricultural College in connection with the State University having an experimental station at Davis.

The time seems ripe when we should introduce into our public schools a training in the rudiments,—at least, of agriculture and horticulture,—many schools, in Eastern States are doing this, with fine results.

No place in California is better fitted for experimental work along these lines than is Campbell. Our grounds are ample—none better—and the adjacent orchards will furnish excellent testing and experimental fields. Of all the newer courses of study being introduced into the schools, none requires less expense for equipment than does this most useful field of knowledge.

The orchardists in this section should demand that the schools supported by their taxes, shall teach such branches as will fit their own boys and girls for the life work it is hoped they will follow. Today it is considered that the one who best knows things is the one who can do them.

Books may come and books may go but old Dame Nature is with us always.

Let not our future orchardists be compelled to work like slaves, but like kings and queens! Some time since I read that California was to be for a time the fertile field of new ideas and discoveries. Mr. Burbank's stupendous and almost miraculous achievements indicate that the prediction is coming true. Science and commercial progress are eliminating distance through the telephone postal service, automobile, etc., and the future home-life on farm and orchard promises wonderful possibilities of delightful independence.

EFFICIENCY IN PRINTING

THE state printing office was not only flooded with legislative printing during the month of January, but the number of school books shipped exceeded all records of the past. Free school books were sent out to 1015 school districts and the total number distributed was 247,519. Last year the total number sent out in January was 97,177 and in 1911 the number was 100,982. The indications are that the demand for free school books will be great and that the state will have to print from two to three times as many books as in the past.

The speed with which legislative printing has been handled by the state printing office has elicited praise from every quarter and Senator Boynton, president pro tem of the senate, in speaking from the chair, paid a high compliment to State Printer Friend W. Richardson and the efficient conduct of his office.

During the past month a number of reports of state officers were printed and in every case a marked reduction in price was shown. The report of the Horticultural Commission this year cost ten cents a copy while two years ago under Shannon it cost forty cents. The Secretary of State's report was produced for nine cents a copy, which is half the previous cost. Two years ago the report of the Eureka Harbor Board cost seventeen and one-half cents and this year the price went down to ten cents. These are but a few samples of the general reduction in the cost of state printing. While the cost has been reduced, the quality has been improved.—Ex.

SACRAMENTO LID ON

AN EMERGENCY ordinance, passed by the Sacramento city commissioners, against gambling, was put into effect at once, and the games, for the first time in Sacramento's history, are closed.

Sacramento was a long time coming to it, but it is no less creditable to have arrived even tardily. It is one necessary step in the evolution of a California town. Even the Kern county oil towns have recently taken it. Nevada, as a state, took it last year. The frontier, as marked by the gambling joint, is everywhere disappearing. Open gambling is a California inheritance. In the pioneer days it flourished everywhere. It is not necessary to condemn the pioneers. Other times; other manners. But the inherited custom tends to survive long after the conditions of which it was a part. A modern California city does not differ particularly from a city of similar size and prosperity anywhere else. An open gambling joint is as inappropriate to Sacramento as it is to Peoria or Wilkesbarre. But it survives, as a relic of another age, and it will continue until positive and vigorous steps are taken to drive it out. Then it disappears, never openly to return. Secret gambling there may be anywhere—though there should be none which a vigilant police can find. But open, public gambling is a relic of the frontier, which an adult city cannot tolerate. Sacramento has definitely put the frontier behind it, and thereby attained its moral majority. Congratulations!—Cal. Outlook.

SINCE the plea in the Press last week for additional Grammar School room for Agricultural and Domestic Science departments several prominent citizens have commented very favorably on the subject. This is a proposition that deserves the interest of every patron of the public schools. Such an addition to the schools is an absolute necessity for a modern education. Why should our children be handicapped? Furthermore the children are crowded in the present departments. A new barn has been built for the accommodation of horses used by the pupils and we notice that each beast has plenty of room. Are the beasts of more importance than the pupils?

CALIFORNIA PETROLEUM IN 1912

Production Six Million Barrels Greater than in Year Preceding

The production of petrolenm in California in 1912 increased to 87 million barrels, from 81 million barrels in 1911, chiefly on account of large gushers developed in the Midway field and the number of good wells opened in La Habra Valley, according to David T. Day, of the United States Geological Survey. The production of the Coast field declined markedly. A number of good producers in the Midway and other valley fields were ruined by an influx of water, which turned the oil to a valueless emulsion. Consumption increased so that the additions to stocks were not as great as was expected. The total stock at the end of 1911 was 44,240,000 barrels. This increased to 48,000,000 barrels at the end of 1912, a gain of less than 4,000,000 barrels, while production increased 6,000,000 barrels, showing that the consumption in 1912 was over 2,000,000 barrels greater than the production of 1911.

The features of particular interest during the year were the development of large wells at unusual depth in La Habra field, the continued development of large gushers in the valley fields, the decline in the old Santa Maria field, the extension of the Coalinga territory by the development of good wells to the south, the increased utilization of natural gas including the enterprise for piping natural gas from the valley fields to Los Angeles, and the increased amount of gasoline obtained by compressing natural gas. Progress was also made, especially in the Midway field, in cracking crude oils to obtain greater yields of gasoline.

Among trade features of interest should be noticed the purchase of 10 million barrels of surplus crude from the Independent agency by the Union Oil Co., the withdrawal of the Standard Oil Co. from the purchase of oils heavier than 18° Baum'e, and the sale of the Union Oil Co. to the General Petroleum Co.

Petroleum Reserves in California.

During the course of the year two reserves of public lands were established to assure the Navy a supply of oil in case of need. These reserves are in the Elk Hills and Buena Vista Hills, Kern County. The public lands within these areas have been withdrawn from all forms of entry during the last three years, but a special reservation for naval purposes had not hitherto been made.

Anecdote of Sheridan.

When Richard Brinsley Sheridan was in distress in early life one of his recourses was that of writing for the fugitive publications of the day, in which he was materially assisted by his wife, and many years after his entrance into the sphere of politics he was heard to say that "if he had stuck to law he believed he should have done as much as his friend Tom Erskine; but," continued he, "I had no time for such studies.

"Mrs. Sheridan and myself were often obliged to keep writing for our daily leg or shoulder of mutton; otherwise we should have had no dinner." One of his friends, with whom he conversed thus, wittily replied, "Then I perceive it was a joint concern."
